To do this, you'll have to change your defaults so that fonts don't just get embedded in the document itself. Save your document and close it out, and then open Word's Options dialog. Find the font setting for the language, and select the Normal option under the embedding subtab. Save the document and close it out and open it back up on your system. It should no longer complain about missing fonts. Had u done the standard install of the OS, there is no problem with the fonts and u can read them easily...but when u use an installer disc, It will not show up. one of the glitches with windows is it does a standard install so it may have a lot of more "unimportant" software installed along with it. I was able to get it to work by using the same Microsoft visual studio to install again a version that had the fonts and then copy them to the "C:" drive. The fonts should show up in the installer as well...try that...if not, check the disk against the one on which windows is installed to ensure there are no corruption issues - it sounds like u may have corrupted the installer disc...thats all I can think of. otherwise try copying the files to your "C:" drive. i'm looking for a "complete" set of Bangla fonts too...there's one that contains all of the characters in the existing Unicode Basic Latin blocks. One of the things is to note is that the language code en stands for English and it actually represents the ISO 639 language code for the English language - so if you look at the list of identifiers for the items below, make sure you're looking at the correct language code. (I suspect the two legitimate en entries at the bottom, which are Bengali but with the UK accent mark in place of the diacritical mark, are simply alternatives for the default Bangla language and are more correctly represented as bn and bn-BD. 5ec8ef588b
