

VIDEO: FIFA 21 provides all-new player likeness, animation and physics - courtesy of IGN FIFA games have traditionally used player models based on the player's footballing resume. In the past, this meant that players of different appearances had to be scaled down to match the scale of players who had a similar playing profile. This year's iteration of the game has been developed using motion capture data from real-world players, allowing the physics of the player models to more accurately reflect real-life player movement. This technology allows the game to be played with greater realism and increased player immersion. "With FIFA 21, we have been building our foundations with the release of the new player models," said Oliver Kreylos, FIFA Lead Producer. "Our vision is that every player in the game feels distinct, and that's why we have combined real-life data with animation technology and physics to create the most authentic-feeling player models and gameplay in the franchise." To allow all-new, hyper-realistic animations that go beyond the animations of past games in the series, FIFA 21 introduces "Journey" technology. Journey technology allows players to speed up, slow down, change direction or cut inside and outside towards a target. Journey has also been redesigned to ensure that the player is more immersed and connected with the game environment around him. “We felt that a one-to-one system, whereby every player in the game moves exactly like the player that they are based on, was wrong,” said Kreylos. “Our vision is that every player in the game feels distinctive and has his own unique personality and style.” FIFA 21 introduces a revamped locker room and stadium screen for all 30 teams. A new presentation of the stadium and locker room also allows players to re-live their own personal best team moments by selecting the best goal, best pass and best assist of their career. The other big feature addition is a new “Pass Master” mode which has been enabled in FIFA 21, allowing players to control the direction and speed of every touch as they pass in ways never before experienced in a FIFA game. This new mode is now in every aspect of the game from free kicks and corner kicks to passes and dribbles. FIFA 21 features: Breathtaking Graphics World Class Visuals The most
