He may also bring in several more like-minded persons. When asked about the reasons behind this, Sinha said that former Union Law Minister and Janata Dal (United) leader Dinesh Chandra Jha was the name behind this outfit. However, Jha is no longer with JDU. He had earlier expressed displeasure over the new government's decision to discontinue the 'national flag carrier' project. Sinha said that he has been receiving reports that Saini, who was a minister in the previous NDA government, was influencing state governments in favour of this scheme. Sinha claims that Saini was involved in making several contractors in the country agree to this proposal. Sinha stated that the two persons who are responsible for producing funds, as well as their backers, are still unknown. He said that he had been getting many calls from those who want to support this project. Sinha feels that this project is a silent one, which is why he has decided to speak up about it. He said that he was prompted to do so because of the persistent requests from the people from Bihar. The flying of the national flag would be stopped in Gujarat, Uttar Pradesh, Karnataka and Punjab. Punjab Assembly Speaker Ravinder Kumar said that the 'flying national flag' project is now a project of `Justice, Development and Integration'. Law Minister Govind Singh Dotara, while releasing the Punjab government's development plan, said that the newly-formed state government of the state has decided to make this project a reality. b7e8fdf5c8

How to download & use it:It's barely a year since controversial talks on the EU's ailing economy ended in failure. The EU wants the eurozone countries to provide 2% of their output each year to a jointly managed European fund and 2% of the euro area's budget to finance European Union projects. That way, it is hoped, a faster economic recovery can be achieved. This Friday the Union is expected to adopt a formal text to present to parliaments and governments in March. This is a formality, however. The original proposal was so weak and so lacking in detail that governments, like angry children, presented a series of modifications to the draft text. They wanted the transfer of sovereignty to be less "diluted" - in other words, they did not want to hand over to Brussels any more power to control national budgets or financial conditions. If Greece were given a budget surplus of 1% of its GDP to spend in the domestic economy - and the current draft does not say anything about this - it would have "full sovereignty" over the funds. But Greece will not have a budget surplus, or even a deficit, for several more years. And even after 2014 it will be forced to enter into a contract - the so-called Stability and Growth Pact - which will tie its hands if the 2% of GDP is never reached. Translate this into plain English - and Greece's policymakers will be forced to apply massive budget cuts of 6% or 7% of GDP a year, even though they are due to see at least a 5% increase in that time. It's bad enough that the eurozone is the first transfer union in history - but if this is what "full sovereignty" over the 2% of GDP is supposed to mean, the people of Europe will strongly resent the word. It's a pity no one has said so in public. The EU and its spokespeople have been strangely silent on this point. The point was raised, indeed, at the last, most intense round of negotiations last September. But the economic ministers were not even asked their views on this point, or on the first draft of the treaty. It's not as if any government is likely to support this foolishness in its present form anyway. Greece's entry into the euro

When I run the function locally (Publish method), everything works fine and I can see the output from the function in the Azure Portal. When I run the function on Azure (assuming that the function output is returned, and that the function is allowed to output), and publish the Azure Function App to Azure, the Function App receives the HTTP POST request but no response, nothing happens. In Azure Portal, there is no output shown and there is no attempt to call any functions at all. I've tried this with both http and https post types and I'm pretty sure I've got the correct permissions set up for the functions to execute (which also, with both, work locally). I've also tried a couple of functions in the Function App with a single output, no return and that also produces no output when run on Azure. Any ideas? A: This turned out to be due to an overly complicated setup that had nothing to do with the issue at all. The issue seems to be having two different functions that are called via the same HTTP POST call.
