You've just finished getting dressed, you are brushing your teeth, when all of a sudden it dawns on you, you have only one pair of underwear on and it's in desperate need of a wash! This is why I have decided to share with you this post which will show you the best hints on how to avoid underpants disaster! ? You're probably thinking right now, this sounds impossible. How can you wash one pair of underwear in the entire morning?? The secret to successfully fulfilling that, is to use a pair of pants as a rescue! This way, the moment you reach your ankles you have a spare pair on and when you have to the to the bathroom then all you need to do is take your very first pair off, take the pants out of the washing machine and put your towel on the floor before getting back into your scrubs. This was what I did and was able to get through all the tasks above without a single catastrophic escape! 2. Don't wash your underwear on the counter. Unless you absolutely have to, try not to wash your underwear on the kitchen or bathroom counter! If you happen to have a

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a coating material for forming a coating film and an image-forming method. 2. Description of the Related Art Coating materials for image-forming methods such as electrophotography, electrostatic recording, magnetic recording, and toner-jet recording are roughly classified into aqueous coating materials and solvent coating materials. Aqueous coating materials are inexpensive and easy to handle, but have a problem of low flexibility and poor anti-solvent resistance. Solvent coating materials solve the problem of low flexibility, but have a high manufacturing cost and involve a problem of poor anti-solvent resistance due to dissolution of an organic solvent in the coating material. A technique for forming an image-forming layer of a coating material (pigmented coat) by blending a water-soluble polymer with a solvent has been proposed. For example, Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open Nos. 2002-148728 and 2004-158647 have disclosed an image-forming method that improves anti-solvent resistance of a coating material by blending an epoxy-based resin having an alkali-soluble group and an aqueous coating material. In addition, Japanese Patent Application Laid-Open Nos. 2008-003886 and 2008-059823 have disclosed a technique for improving image-forming properties (water resistance, abrasion resistance, and image density) of a coating material by blending a water-insoluble resin in the coating material. However, since the above-described technique for improving image-forming properties of a coating material by blending a water-insol
