Keyboard Macro Creator is a handy utility which makes you able to record keyboard macros, also called Hotkeys, on an empty or existing text document. What are hotkeys? They are very simple to use. A hotkey is basically a sequence of keystrokes. When you set a hotkey, you also type in a description. For instance, the description could be that you want to record the path to a certain file or that you want to open a certain editor. The description is optional. It is not possible to record hotkeys on a running program. After the hotkey sequence is recorded on the file, the program has to be stopped. So you can record the hotkey sequence on an empty file, which you will later use to open an existing file. After all the hotkey sequences are recorded, you can play them back on your keyboard using the keyboard macro recorder. Is the user interface language-independent? Yes. The hotkeys you create with the program can be used in any language. The only thing is that you will have to adapt your hotkey to the keyboard layout of your computer.
