I would like that the user can only interact with the UserControl, but the user can still change the code in the form. Is there any way to do this? UPDATE I am using WinForms, therefore the code in the Button needs to be located in the form. A: Yes you can, if you want that users can't click the button, you should use the [DesignMode] tag to disable the button then put the code you want to run in the button_Click method of the user control. public partial class ButtonUserControl : UserControl { [DesignMode(false)] public void button_Click(object sender, EventArgs e) { //Do whatever you want } } 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to apparatuses for use in surgical procedures and to a method of controlling the flow of laser energy during a surgical procedure. In particular, the present invention relates to a YAG laser handpiece and a fibro-laser handpiece capable of generating coherent fiber laser energy at a spectral wavelength of about 1060 nm and about 1120 nm and about 1550 nm, respectively. 2. Description of Related Art Currently, the YAG laser is commonly used for procedures such as gastric sterilization, fibroid removal, laser enucleation of the prostate, suturing, laser vaporization of the prostate and laser papillectomy. YAG lasers have a relatively low output power (for example, 20 mJ) and thus, must be used with optical fibers to transmit the laser energy from the laser to the handpiece. f988f36e3a
