Block copolymer, poly(styrene-co-methylmethacrylate-co-sulfobetaine) was synthesized via RAFT polymerization. The sulfobetaine segments were conjugated onto the polymer chain by initiating the polymerization from the sulfobetaine methacrylate methacrylate to yield the amphiphilic block copolymer, poly(styrene-co-methylmethacrylate-co-sulfobetaine-co-poly(acrylic acid) (PMMA-co-SB-co-PAA), which was designed for biomedical applications. The copolymer was characterized by <sup>1</sup>HNMR, FTIR and GPC. The hydrophobic methyl methacrylate blocks were found to strongly enhance the glass transition temperature (T<sub>g</sub>) of the copolymer. The amphiphilic property of the copolymer was characterized by investigating the self-assembling behavior. It was found that the critical micellar concentration (CMC) of the copolymer was close to 10 ppm in water, suggesting that the copolymer formed micelles in water. The copolymer showed excellent cytocompatibility and biodegradation behavior in culture mediums. The biodegradation behavior of the copolymer in culture medium was controlled by the composition of the copolymer. This copolymer could be used as an effective barrier to retard the release of drugs from polymer matrix or as a biodegradable coating for medical devices.Thursday, February 9, 2011 So what makes yoga so hard for you to get started with, or keep going? Most people say that they want to "get into yoga" or "keep on with yoga" but very few actually do. It is because they have preconceived notions about the practice of yoga that they are struggling with or too busy to make the commitment. Here are some of the reasons people give me when I ask them f988f36e3a
