The Director-General, Office of the Registrar, International Conference on Maritime Safety and Maritime Law: "Two Tribes: the Search for a Sociological Interpretation of Water Disasters", presented at the Fifth Congress of the Committee of Studies on the future of the ocean (CoSin), Paris, 1995; "Migration and Security: Environment in Transport", Journal of Transport and Safety, 1 (1996); "Developments and Prospects of the Marine Environment", Observatoire Maritime International (OMI), Association de Langue Francaise, Paris, Vol. 6, No. 3 (1997); "Dedicated Wing of the Ocean: The European Commission", paper presented at the Eighth International Congress of the European Commission for Maritime Research and Safety, "The European Union and the Protection of the Marine Environment", Lisbon, 1999; "Enabling International Maritime Environment Protection through Science", presented at the First Workshop on International Science and Technology for the Marine Environment, Paris, February 22 to 25, 2000; The Director-General of the Centre de Valorisation Maritime, Paris, which has been supporting the Centre since its creation in 1981, was elected in November 2001 for a term of four years. The Centre (Institut Maritime et Vétérinaire), opened in February 1986 at a ceremony presided over by the then Minister of Transport, Mr Marcel Hervé, is a unique and highly significant contribution to France's scientific and technical development, said Mr M. J.G. Hervé, Director-General. The Centre, funded by the State and the regional agencies, provides particularly for the training of young specialists and the promotion of the civilian research and the dissemination of information activities in the field of protection of the marine environment. The Centre is currently benefiting from a wide-ranging scientific partnership with international organisations, in the form of projects providing facilities in the field of marine ecology, technology, ecology, marine environment, vulnerability of ecosystems, sustainable development of the sea and the oceans. These partnerships are implemented by the Marine Environment Protection Research Centre (Meprc) at the Institut National de la Recherche Agronomique (INRA), and the Centre is a contributor to projects in coordination with the European Commission, with the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA) in the field of marine physical and biological sciences, and the Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB) for the ecoswaps project for the

Maedi-visna virus is the prototype of a group of closely related lentiviruses of sheep. Members of this genus include the closely related ovine and caprine lentiviruses as well as the simian lentivirus SIV of a baboon and one feline lentivirus. Our studies are directed toward understanding the molecular biology of lentiviruses, in particular that of the major structural proteins, the viral nucleic acids and the role of the cell in the life cycle of the virus. We initiated an investigation of the mechanism of interaction of host and virus by expression of gag and env from the mammalian cell line COS. This has led to the identification of a cellular translation factor that enhances the translation of viral RNA in vitro. This factor appears to also function in vivo and is involved in the generation of the gag and env polyprotein precursors. We are also developing a detailed molecular model of the env proteins in the membrane of the virus. The role of the cell in the viral life cycle has been examined by insertion of the gene for the viral envelope glycoprotein (env) into an expression vector for the gene for a marker protein (neo). Insertion of this marker gene into HIV-1, the feline leukemia virus and two strains of SIV allowed selection for insertion of the env gene in both orientations. Since env has multiple functions, these insertion mutants can be used to study the effect of altering env function on viral infectivity and pathogenicity. Our studies have also focused on the regulation of the LTR promoter in the early phase of infection. The transcription factors involved in the regulation of LTR and other promoters have been studied and shown to include host and virus-encoded products. Their sequence specificities for binding have been determined by oligonucleotide footprinting. Over the past few years, the rate at which ICS end users are migrating to IP-PBX solutions like Asterisk has been growing at a tremendous rate, and it's moving not just to small and medium-sized businesses, but to larger enterprises. This growth is due to a number of factors, but at the heart of this evolution is Asterisk's ability to leverage a massive amount of user data which can be used to drive decision making and drive service revenue and profitability. IP-PBX, OAuth, and CRM Before we talk about how this can happen, let's first review a few other key trends that
