Failing a drug or alcohol test in Canada is very serious. In most jurisdictions, simple possession of drugs or alcohol is an infringement, which means that you will be fined without the need for a criminal conviction, and in some jurisdictions, the fine can be as much as $1,000. However, simple possession of drugs or alcohol for the purpose of consumption may constitute an offence under certain circumstances. For example, drug use on an airline or within the passenger cabin is a violation, and even using in the most common cases, you will also be fined. If you are facing criminal charges in Canada for possession of drugs or alcohol, or other drug-related offences, it is in your best interest to contact us. Canada has zero tolerance for the use of drugs and alcohol and a criminal offence is regarded as an indication of drug use and drug related offences. Drug charges could also affect your immigration status if Canada did not you prior to your departure. If you are facing serious drug charges in Canada, the best thing to do is to get legal representation right away. Lawyers from Gray Johnson, as well as other lawyers across Canada, are willing to discuss the options you have to retain a lawyer for your case. Whether
