Created by a group called the American Unity Fund, the billboard shows an image of Jesus Christ, along with the question, "God allowed some to be gay so that they could become some of His best creations. Help us promote this position through sponsorship!" It is located at the entrance of Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, a conservation area that attracts thousands of people each month. For the most part, visitors come to see sea lions and other marine life, but the American Unity Fund has determined to use this space to promote their goals of promoting conservative Christian ideals. For years, LGBT people have been protesting the billboard. The American Unity Fund claims that the only reason to protest the billboard is that they are conservative Christians. During that time, they have received support from radio host Rush Limbaugh and American evangelist Pat Robertson. Now that the billboard has been put up, the pressure has really increased. Even though the American Unity Fund claims that they only want to promote one view, groups like the Monterey Bay LGBT Pride Center claim that it promotes hatred and discrimination. They filed a complaint with the National Park Service over the use of federal money to put the billboard up. It was published this week that the National Park Service will be reviewing the complaint. The LGBT groups claim that Christians should not be able to use their views to exclude people based on their sexual
